Language and Communication Skills

The Department of English has been extremely sedulous about the English accent, as most of their students have had their schooling in Malayalam medium. The teachers of the department aid the freshers in classroom, on and off campus to correct their deviant ways of pronunciation due to the mother tongue influence and approximate their enunciation to neutral accent. To this feat, the genuinely interested students and those aspire to qualify IELTS or TOEFL are picked from the various classes and multitiered edutaining tasks are pressed into service for them.

Online audio books on the most popular English works are played, and the Classic English movies with subtitles are screened to the students in the ICT enabled Seminar Hall, before or after the regular teaching hours.

When the students get familiar to the English accent through this practice, they are taught the forty-four phonemes or the speech sounds of English. As the neutral accent or the International English is most akin to the King's English, Received Pronunciation (RP) is taught to them using Compact Discs released by the Oxford University Press and Cambridge University Press.

The students are then introduced to 'stress' and 'intonation' of connected speech for which the online education sites of British Council and BBC are brought into play.

Besides, students are made to download mobile applications like 'World Radio', 'Daily English Conversation', 'BBC Learning', 'British English Listening' and many more.

Once the students get ample confidence, they talk in English to their peers and then to their teachers who give them necessary corrections to hone their listening and speaking skills. As the skill development measures for the other two—reading and writing—are already part of their curriculum, the students become well versed in all the four skills associated with language.

The ICT enabled Seminar Hall and mobile phones are all it takes to accomplish this mission.

ICT training during the year 2021-2022

Department of Computer Science

ICT training is organized by Computer Science Department to First year BCA students who were lacking the computer programming skills, especially to Biology-Science students (at +2 level). The aim of the training is to boost the computer knowledge and programming skills so that they can excel in computer programming language courses. Integrating the latest ICT tools for the best implementation of this training. Here we used the online tools like online programming editors for the live demonstration of the logic of the problem and execution. The students are capable of using e-resources for learning of curricular subjects, interact with ICT devices confidently and practice safe, legal and ethical means of using ICT.

| Number of students attended training | : | 21 |
